The News by the Helvetin.

The following is a summary of the news sent out by the Helvetia, from Liverpool on the 16th. In the House of Commons on the 13th, Mr. White put his question as to whether the Government intended to withdraw the belligerent rights from the so-called Con-

Lord Palmerston said the course of transactions with regard to the beligerent rights of the two parties was this: The President of the United States issued a proclamation declaring a blockade of all the const and certain ports of the Southern Confederacy, in accordance, he said, with the law of nations. Now, a blockade, according to the law of nations was a belligerent right, which could only accrue to a State which was at war when the President declared a blockade was ostablished. The only course was to acknowledge his right to do so as belligerents, and submit to it; but that necessarily involved that the other party, who was a belligerent, was entitled to be so considered. Of course, whenever the United States ceased to exercise the rights they now claim, there would be no necessity for the acknowledgement of belligerent rights either on one side or the other.

In the House of Lords Lord Houghton made a similar inquiry, but used the term concession of belligerent rights, Earl Russell replied in substance similar to Lore Palmerstou, but objected to the wording of the question and to the time of putting it as most inopportune. It was not a question of concession but of netual fact. The question was an infortunate as to time, because at gether above us, be a symbol of that fraternity of heart which exists between these two peoples, who have the same sympathies and the same aspirations." But perhaps the most significant manifestation of sympathy is found in The Levant Herald, the English paper of the Empire, which has heretofore been very strong in its sympathy for the South. It says:

In the House of Lords Lord Houghton made a similar inquiry, but used the term concession of belligerent rights. Earl Russell replied in substance similar to Lore Palmerston, but objected to the wording of the question and to the time of putting it as most inopportune. It was not a question of concession but of actual fact. The question was unfortunate as to time, because at present it was very difficult to say what was the state of the case, and the Government was anxious to know what course the United States Government intended to pursue. Until they knew it was impossible to give an answer.

"His death will cast a halo round bis name in history, and if it has prevented the glory which he might have carned as the second founder of the United States, it has likewise spared him the risk of failure which might have involved even disgrace. He will stand alone in the anhals of mankind, as one who, in the midst of a struggle which called forth the most bitter reproaches, and often the vilest insignations from friend and foe, remained with a reputation untainted and unstanted—who, born and educated in the middle classes, preserved in the chloftainship of a restless and unrespecting Republic some of the reverence and almost are given elsewhere to the divinity that doth hedge a king, than was ever given except to royalty—who can be accused in the midst of so many difficulties of no act of meanness or of folly, and who, by the solid firmness and energy of his character, did more for the triumph of his cause than the victories of its generals. Under a different chief of the State, these victories might have been sterile, even if they had been won at all. The conduct and reputation of President Lincoln gave force to the triumphs, and softened the defeats of the North, and it might almost be said that under no other man would the Federal arms have achieved the success which has involved to himself so sada fatality."

The same paper makes the following remarks in strong in its sympathy for the South. It says:

The particulars in reference to this terrible calamity have not reached us, but we tremble to think of its in fluence upon the public mind of the North.

CONSOLIDATION OF THE TURKISH DEBT. The Turkish debt has hitherto been a most compli cated affair. It has consisted of half a dozen species of called Medjidie's and Azizie's, and busenilieks and Tahvils, &c. A cunning Englishman has devised a plan for consolidating all these into a single debt paying 5 per cent interest. His object, of course, is his fee $4,000,000. The bait he offers is a new loan of £7,000,000, for "public improvements" (Sultan's palaces !). The from late American advices.

The American Church at Paris was crowded on the two loan opened to-day in Constantinople, Londo lath, on the occasion of services in memory of Mr. Lincoln. The Americans in Paris were wearing crape seen whether the public will furnish the money (t seen whether the public will furnish the money (the shares are issued at 50 per cent discount) for enriving to the Porte than to the holders of the new or of some of the old stocks. In Northern Syria the people of Anti-Taurus have been in rebellion against the Turkish Government for many years. The only solitary act of authority which the Sultan has attempted there with success, during these years, was carried out under the pressure of the United States Government.

An American missionary, Mr. Coffing, was murdered there, and only one of his murderers was caught and executed. The other was protected by one of the lade. pendent Chiefs of this District. As he would not give him up, the United States Government demanded the arrest and punishment of the Chief. They pushed it so far that this Chief was decoyed by the Turks into snare set for him, at a dinner party, arrested and sent to Constantinople.

Since that time, these rebels have taken the offensive and at last, some weeks ago, an army of 20,000 or 30,000 But on the approach of the advance divisions of this claring their great desire to obey the Sultan, &c.

This dodge has succeeded to a charm. The army has been recalled, and the two chiefs are to come to Constantinople, receive the rank and title of Pashas, and be appointed each to the government of his own district.

The buildon in the Bank of England has to. stood by the following quotation rroun a series of always resolutions already adopted by the Presbyterian (O. S.) General Assembly at Pittsburg, and also adopted here: Resolved, That a committee of four ministers and three laymen be appointed by this meeting to present this subject to the General Assembly, and to be associated with a similar committee to be appointed by that body, in devising plans by which a general and concerted movement of all the Protestant forces of the land may be brought about, and beld, continuous and vigorous protest, by word and set, shall be enoughed against both infidelity and floman Catholicism, the archemotic of truth in the midst of the professing Church of God, and implementators to civil and religious freedom throughout the world.

and irch-traiters to civil and religious freedom throughout the world.

The next business, and that which occupied the remainder of the morning, was upon Church Pohity. A report from the committee having that matter in charge took the ground that while a civil court could compel the presence of an offender, the authority of the ecclesiastical court, in case of a minister cited to appear for trial, did not extend so far, and a refusal to appear simply laid the offender liable for continuer.

The matter was discussed pre and contra with great zoal by a number of prominent gentlemen of the Church, and was finally settled so satisfactorily that we only know that the next Assembly, at M. Louis, will have the piensure of trying its many hands at pelemics with it.
